Letter To The Editor

Madison Hts., Va. 24572

Dear Mrs. Harvey:

I am writing you in hopes that my wife and I will be able to contribute to your Railroad Day forthcoming. We relocated in this area, from Dayton, Ohio and our future plans include a fine railroad museum in the not too distant future. We have been collecting railroad artifacts for a number of years, and have acquired items of high museum quality and have some very famous ones as well. To name a few that would be of great interest to your visitors are: Large front number plate from Union Pacific RR #4000, the first BIG BOY built, and was the largest engines built in the world. Only 25 were built and our plate is from the first one. These huge engines go down in history as unchallenged in size. To make the plate a bit more interesting, we also have the very tall bronze whistle from engine #4001, the 2nd such giant of the series. I also have the famed whistle of the late Joe Dennis, a true whistle artist and the story I wrote of him and the whistle, were published in the Iron Men Album in Nov. 1970. This is beautifully polished to a brilliant mirror finish and is all bronze. Another nice sized whistel is a tall steamboat type from the Duluth Mossabi & Iron Range RR and was from another huge locomotive of which only 18 of the type were built. These engines could pull 16,600 tons single handed, and the consist was iron ore for the from the U.S.Steel Co. We have a good number of beautifully finished whistles that are all mounted on a compact rack in which allows blowing of same, on only 2 LB pressure. This provides an excellent way of demonstrating their sound as well as a good display stand. With the use of this low pressure and an idea of my own, can blow these whistles without the ear piercing problem, and no boiler is needed, thus no problem with heat, coal, or other dangers. Of other whistles we have, is a nice large one of all bronze, which adorned the tugboat "BRONX" which belonged to the New York Central RR and was used for transporting freight cards across the Hudson River. This has a beautiful tone and is connected to the rack. There are other way interesting whistles, but this will give you an idea of what we have in that line.

We have a very beautiful loco bell which is solid brass, the frame, yoke and all, is brass. it is the only such bell we have ever seen like it & is historical as well as beautifully finished in gleaming beauty. We have many other items of smaller degree, such as switch lamps, hand lanterns, switch keys, Well Fargo items, locomotive builders plates of various roads and builders, loco cab pressure gauges and a host of other items that could be detailed on a number of pages. We have strived to get the very best in this fascinating hobby and we think the public will be pleased with the results. I forget to mention, we also have a number of 8" X 10" photos of Civil War railroad engines and scenes, as well as later steam loco photos in 8" X 10" size and smaller.

Would it be possible to help make part of your Railroad Days a memory of ours and your visitors? We do have some material that will be available for trade or sale to others wishing to add to their hobby. This would be items that we have duplication of, or others that are not of our interest.

Thank you for taking the time to read this and will await your earliest reply. Until then, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
L.G.Simpson

The Pastor Speaks

The "Perfect" Christian

Texts: Philippians 3:12,15: "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect...Let us therefore, as many as be perfect..."

Is there such a person whom we could call a perfect Christian? Sometimes we find those who claim perfection and those who expect it out of of others. The Apostle Paul says that some of the Philippian Christians and also he himself were perfect. But in verse twelve he seems to be disputing what he is saying in verse fifteen. How are we to understand this? The answer is found in the fact that in verse twelve Paul is speaking of a finished process and absolute spiritual maturity be y o n d which there is no room for improvement; whereas in verse fifteen he is speaking of relative spiritual maturity where there is room for development and growth. The phrase, "Let us...as many be perfect," could be read," as many therefore as are spiritually mature." The "perfect" Christian is one not in a state of sinlessness, but one of completeness, of a well rounded Christian character, a state opposite to spiritual infancy. Here we have a Christian who is growing in the knowledge and wisdom of God, and applying this in his daily life.

Here in Appomattox we have many Christians who have a well rounded Christian character. They are growing and maturing all the time. Setting the right example as born again Christians who believe in the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, and who are waiting for the Rapture of the Church.

God sent His Son into the world that whoever would believe and receive this Son (Jesus Christ) into their heart in faith will find forgiveness of sin by turning their lives from the dominion of sin. God's Spirit will begin to lead, direct, and keep your life eternally. (John 3:16; 4: 16,17,26) It is only in this way that the Christian will find perfection.

The Sunday School Lesson

Comment on the International Sunday School lesson for Sunday, October 28, 1973.

Topic: Victory In Suffering

Scripture: Romans 8 - He who did not spare his own Son but gave him up for us all, will he not also give us all things with him.? Romans 8:32.

In his letter to the Christian Chruch at Rome, Paul writes of man's sinfulness and of God's redemption, of justification and sanctification, of God's initiative in bridging the gulf which separates Him from man, of man's opportunity to accept salvation in the faith that it is efficacious, of that absorbing paradox of freedom in servanthood. To what result all this?

The Scriptural background for this week's International Sunday School lesson, Romans 8, describes the cindition of the person who has been redeemed and justified, who lives in freedom as God's servant, who is growing in the knowledge and acceptance of it has been elevated from servanthood to sonship. The condition is not one of human perfection, either in the personal life of the justified saint or in the society in which he lives; nor is it one in which the redeemed person is freed from trouble and problems and suffering.

The condition is one of life, with all its trouble and problems and suffering, but it is one of living triumphantly in the Spirit of God, in the firm confidence of eternal life with God, in the conviction that God is working out His purpose in history to His glory and to man's blessing. "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has set me free from the law of sin and death."

To live truly is to live in the Spirit. The life which focuses on and centers in the self is not really life, but death. Only by living in the Spirit and the hope which such living cultivates is the individual strengthened to cope with the problems and difficulties which come into every life and to prevent them from overwhelming him.

Although the letter to the Romans is usually described as primarily theological in content, it contains sound advice for, practical living as well. Faith and practice are not sharply compartmentalized segments of human life, but are so well blended that each reflects the other. The believer demonstrates his faith in his conduct, and his practice reflects the faith that is in him.

In the hope of adoption into the family of God, Paul writes, "we are saved." To Paul's contemporaries adoption had more significance than it does now. Then the adopted son became as truly as son as if he had been born to the parents; he also assumed the responsibilities of a natural-born son, to carry on the family worship and traditions, as well as the name, and in pagan Roman families to pay the ritualistic tributes to the spirits of the family's ancestors there. Indeed, it was to perform these duties that a sonless father adopted a boy. To be adopted into the family of God, in the accepted usage in Paul's day, meant to become truly a child of God with all the obligations, as well as all the privileges, of sonship.

Although "hope that is seen is not hope," there is a solid foundation on which to base the hope of adoption. For this hope is founded not so much on abstract faith as it is on something God has already done: God gave up His own Son "for us all," or as Paul put it elsewhere in this letter, "But God shows his love for us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." God has already given up His Son for man's redemption, may He not be depended upon to fulfill all His other promises, including His promise of redemption to those who in faith and hope accept it?

The believer is not promised release from trouble and suffering in this world, but he is given the assurance of salvation from the death sin inflicts on those who live in slavery to sin. In the confidence of eternal life for the individual believer and of the ultimate working out of God's purpose in the world, the believer can live triumphantly over the external troubles

Those nagging little questions about savings...

Why do certificates pay more than passbook savings? Well, a Fidelity Passbook gives you just about the end in savings convenience. You can open your account with as little as a dollar. You can add or withdraw anytime in any odd or even amount you like. And every dollar earns full interest for the whole time it's here. That means quite a lot of expensive bookkeeping. It also means keeping idle cash on hand to meet withdrawals. But even so, Fidelity wants savers and pays the highest interest any bank is allowed to pay–5% compounded continuously.

Now Savings Certificates are special certificates of deposit. You buy them for some specific amount which you plan to leave here for a certain time. That means much less paper work for us. Also,we can keep less cash on hand, and have more money out on loan, working and earning. Result, our costs are lower, our earnings are higher. And Fidelity passes much of that on in higher certificate interest–the highest interest any bank is permitted to pay.

Is there any real difference between "interest rate" and "interest yield"? Yes, indeed. Interest rate is the numerical rate which the Federal Reserve's "Regulation Q" allows member banks to pay. However, this rate does not reflect the extra money you earn when your interest is compounded–that is, when your interest is added to your savings, and you get interest on interest. Because Fidelity compounds interest continuously, a 5% Fidelity Passbook Account actually yields you 5.127% annually. Or a 6½% Fidelity Certificate yields 6.71% a year.

How can Fidelity compound interest continuously? That's an advantage you get from Fidelity's computerized bookkeeping. In the old, handposting days, interest was usually added to your savings every three or six months. But now our computer figures your interest every instant, then adds the interest to your savings instantaneously–so that the next instant, you earn interest on the new, bigger total. Over the years, it can make your savings grow a good many dollars faster.

Who says what certificates a bank can issue? Both the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation limit the amount of certificates any member bank can issue which have a minimum maturity of four years, a minimum deposit of $1,000, and no interest limitations. The limit is one twentieth (1/20) of a bank's total savings deposits. Fidelity has issued all its allowable certificates of this type. However, you can still get Fidelity 6½% Certificates. They run for a minimum of 2½ years. And with Fidelity's continuously compounded interest, they yield 6.71% annually.

What does certificate "maturity" mean? Each Savings Certificate is issued for the length of time you contract to leave your money on deposit, and interest is set accordingly. 5½% on a 90-day certificate, 6% on a one-year certificate. And 6½% on certificates running 2½ years or longer. In order to earn full interest, plus the extra benefits of continuous compounding, you must hold your certificate until it "matures" at the end of the term for which it was issued.

What happens if I cash a certificate before it "matures"? All certificates now being issued by Fidelity can be cashed without question, anytime you wish. However, the new, stringent Federal Reserve regulations require that when a certificate is cashed early, the bank must withhold three months interest. The most the bank is allowed to pay on certificates that are cashed early, is the passbook rate of 5% for the time the money was actually on deposit minus the three months interest.

Can I convert certificates into new ones at higher rates? This used to be allowed. But now the Federal Reserve requires that when a certificate is converted before it matures, the same interest penalty must apply as though it were being cashed before maturity.

What makes a certificate "automatically renewable"? All certificates now available at Fidelity give you this benefit. When you take out your certificate, you can tell Fidelity to notify you when your certificate matures so that you can cash it with full, continuously compounded interest. Or you can tell us to renew it automatically. That way, even if you forget, your money goes right on earning.

Do I have to leave my interest to be compounded? No. If you want to use your savings interest to live on, Fidelity gladly mails it to you regularly or deposits it to your checking account.

Just what does "Member FDIC" mean to me? It means you have the extra protection of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This agency of the Federal Government guarantees each depositor's checking and savings up to a total of $20,000. Ask your Fidelity banker about various combinations of accounts that can be insured for even more.

If I have savings, why do I need a Christmas Club? Many people find that the 50 weekly Christmas Club deposit coupons–like time payment coupons on an appliance–help them "buy" a Merry Christmas on the easy payment plan. What's more, they don't mind spending their Christmas Club check–though they might hesitate to draw out regular savings to pay for Christmas giving and fun. Fidelity offers you this 5% interest on your Christmas Club savings. Try it!

How many ways can I save at Fidelity? Right now, you can choose from four plans–each paying the highest interest any bank can pay. 5% Passbook Account that yields 5.127% because interest is compounded continuously. 5½% Three-Month Certificates, yielding 5.6%. 6% One-Year Certificates, yielding 6.18% annually. 6½% Certificates, running 2½ years, and yielding 6.71% annually. All certificates can be automatically renewable. Interest from three months, one year and 2½ year Certificates can also be mailed to you as income or deposited to your checking account.

Talk with a Fidelity Savings Counselor. Work out with him how much you should have in your checking account–how much for emergencies in passbook savings–how much you can wisely put into savings certificates. That way, your savings grow faster. As an extra, your credit standing grows, too–making it easier and quicker for you to get a Fidelity loan or Fidelity financing. All of which is fine with us–because the whole Fidelity idea is helping you grow helps us grow.
